Saturday evening, August 31, 2024 "A Day Interconnected by Divinity" Email Preamble

Theme: "Discerning True Prayer from Wishes "

This time, we will clearly distinguish between "prayer" and "wishes," with a true prayerful heart that has transcended the ego, we will envelop the world with the light of the Universal God.

We have been taught that "prayer is to declare and resonate with the light of life as words." Through true prayer, we can dissolve the small self into the great life (the great self at the source of life) that gives rise to and nurtures all things and lives in a state where we have reduced all physical bodies to the divine self.

Our daily lives are always accompanied by prayer, and while we may aspire to the Divinity within ourselves, the thoughts that appear are two-fold: one that limits ourselves and one that appears as a one-sided judgment of others. (It is fading away)

When we see the "thoughts that do not recognize divinity" and "thoughts that judge and condemn oneself and others" that appear even while we wish to "remain divine," we are reminded of the importance of true prayer. When I hear "true prayer," I think of the Prayer for the World Peace.

I love the prayers "May Peace Prevail on Earth" and "May peace be in XX." But I also love the prayer, "May our missions be accomplished." When I think of a specific individual, including myself, I know no prayer surpassing the words "May XX-san's missions be accomplished."

For example, when a loved one is suffering from an illness, it is only natural to pray, "I pray that XX-san's illness will be cured soon." This is a natural and good thought for a person with a Physical Body. However, when we look at the person from the perspective of their Guardian Deities and Guardian Spirits, the "wishes" that we believe to be "prayers" may not necessarily be in the same direction as the guidance of the person's Guardian Deities and Guardian Spirits.

For example, suppose the Guardian Deities and Guardian Spirits of that person plan to leave that person in a state of illness for a few more years to refine and raise their soul. In that case, our wish for "a speedy recovery from illness" will not be able to fulfill its role as a true prayer.

As I mentioned at the beginning, a true prayer is an outpouring of energy that allows the workings of life to be fulfilled. That means that if we make a wish in a different direction from our Guardian Spirits and Guardian Deities, we will not be sending them the light of support.

So how can we pray in a way that helps the light of the other person's life to shine fully? I assert that the best way to pray is to pray, "May XX-san's missions be accomplished." Because that is a true prayer.

When I consider this, I am deeply moved to learn that 69 years ago, in 1955, the supreme prayer for individuals, "May our heavenly mission be fulfilled," was announced.

When we pray “May XX missions be accomplished.”, our hearts connect with our Guardian Deities and Guardian Spirits, and the light from our true self resonates out. Such true prayers are also a very powerful support for the Guardian Deities and Guardian Spirits of the person to whom we are praying.

It is the Guardian Deities and Guardian Spirits of that person who know what kind of changes in fate will lead to the deeper development of that person's soul. When the guidance of those Guardian Deities and Spirits resonates with our prayers, it will powerfully promote the development of that person's True Self.

On Saturday nights, the hearts of all those who guess about nature, living things, and humanity around the world, and the hearts of the gods, good spirits, and cosmic angels of the universe who work to save the world will be united and connected, and we will make it a time to brightly illuminate the world.

Saturday evening, August 31, 2024 "A Day Interconnected by Divinity" Opening Remarks

Hello everyone. We will start the program for "A Day Interconnected by Divinity" on Saturday evening, August 31st.

Today, we will reaffirm the beauty of the prayer "May XX's missions be accomplished.", which is the best way to pray for the people and nature that exist in this world.

We will also send light to the world's people who hold the key to becoming a planet in harmony with nature and living things, which have been polluted, oppressed, driven away, and injured by humans and the world's humanity, who hold the key to making the Earth a planet in harmony with nature and living things; I would like to send them light using words and the Divine Spark IN and embrace them all with a heart of love.

In my email on Thursday, I wrote that it would be better to pray "May XX's missions be accomplished." rather than "May XX's illness be cured." I will explain this further.

The reason for this is that the prayer "May XX's missions be accomplished" is a prayer of total surrender, in which you entrust everything to the Guardian Deities and Spirits and the other Gods who protect and guide the world. There is no room for the ego or self to get involved, so this is the best way to pray.

Also, it is not wrong, "May XX's illness be cured." However, if you pray, "May XX's missions be accomplished." while embracing your own feelings of compassion, "That's how I feel in my physical body," you will be able to send out energy that will strengthen the Guardian Deities and Spirits of the other person.

As a physical being, your thoughts will continue to appear in your mind until the laws of this world are elevated to the level of the laws of the spiritual and divine worlds. Therefore, it is fine if your selfish thoughts appear. That is because they are like the shadows that are created on objects that are illuminated by light.

The key is to recognize, forgive, and love even selfish thoughts as "part of who I am," just as you wouldn't guess "shadow, disappear" when you see your own shadow. Furthermore, by praying from a divine standpoint, using the words of a prayer that is directly connected to the sacred origin of "May XX's missions be accomplished.", we can fulfill our role as gods in the world of the physical body.

Today, let us deliver the Universal God's light, the universe's ultimate life energy, to the air, water, Earth, plants, animals, and all humanity with a heart of such great and wide love as our standard equipment.

First, Prayer for World Peace in both English and Japanese.
